Dear Josh:

In reply to your letter of September 2, I know of no commercially available instrument which could be modified easily to give an instrument comparable to the photonreflectometer which we use. I would suggest that you have the University shop make one for you.

The principal features of the instrument have been described by Libby (Science, 93, 459 (1941)). Lampen expects to visit your laboratory at Yale this coming Monday and can explain some of the details of construction.

With best regards,

Sincerely,

Ray.
